Safety Instructions:

- Choking hazard due to small parts, especially in the event of improper handling or unauthorised access by children.
- Magnetic hazards: The magnet can be dangerous if it is put in the mouth or placed near electronic devices, as strong magnets can attract other metallic objects.
- Avoid contact with electronic devices, as strong magnets can damage them. In particular, protect medical devices such as pacemakers.
- Avoid direct contact of the magnets with skin and sensitive surfaces.
- Secure the magnets in a safe place to prevent improper use.
- Protect your eyes, especially when using strong magnetic forces.
- Keep away from small children to avoid choking hazard.
